3. Scope of the insurance policy

The insurance company shall provide compensation for the damage actually occurred. The insurance includes, within the insured study, those clinical investigations that are carried out in India within the duration of the contract.

The coverage includes damages that occur during the insured period (i.e. in the duration of the contract and the post-trial insurance coverage).

In cases of doubt the personal damages are considered to have occurred at the time when the trial subject first consulted a physician for symptoms that on this occasion or subsequently were proved to be symptoms of the personal damages concerned.

Following expiry of the contract personal damages will also be covered under the conditions of the contract if they occur within 60 months following the expiry of the contract (post-trial insurance coverage).

- e) Personal damages to a patient in the control group, insofar as they are attributable to the application of a Drug product that has already been licensed for this indication. However, this does not exclude claims for personal damages attributable to a breach of the obligation to exercise due care by the policyholder or a third party commissioned by it to carry out the clinical trial.
- f) Personal damages to a patient that do not exceed a certain degree of adverse reactions that are to be expected from the trial drug according to the current state of medical knowledge, insofar and to the extent that comparably serious damages could have

5. Premium

5.1 Basis for calculating the premium

The premium is calculated on the basis of the number of trial subjects taking part in the insured study or clinical trial for the duration of the contract.

5.2 Payment of premium and due balance

The provisional premium mentioned in the policy falls due on the first of policy period.

The definitive premium is calculated at the end of the contract or after the contract has been cancelled. For this the policyholder must supply the necessary information; the insurance company may consult all relevant documents to check this information. Supplementary premiums and reimbursements fall due for payment on delivery of the balance statement to the policyholder.

6. Obligations

6.1 Obligations of the policyholder

- a) Should the policyholder carry out the clinical trial itself, it is obliged:
 - (i) To comply with the Indian legislation related to drugs
 - (ii) To inform the trial subjects about the existence of the obligations incumbent upon them as listed in paragraph 6.2 below.
- b) Should the policyholder commission a third party to carry out the clinical trial, it must ensure that the third party adheres to the obligations mentioned in paragraph 6.1 letter a of these requirements.
- c) Should any event occur whose probable consequences may affect this insurance, the policyholder must report it to the insurance company without delay. The insurance company must be notified of a death occurrence early enough so that it can, if necessary, arrange for a post-mortem at its own expense before the burial (subject to the rights of the deceased's family).
- d) The policyholder is obliged, to the extent that it is able, to help the insurance company to ascertain the facts and reduce the damages.
- e) On the request of the insurance company, the investigator must be instructed to draft a report on the personal damages and, after completion of the medical treatment, a final report, with the consent of the trial subject; in addition, it must be ensured that all other reports by the investigator requested by the insurance company are provided. In insured cases the insurance company bears the costs of the report, otherwise these are borne by the policyholder.

- f) On condition that the personal damage has been reported and the trial subject has given consent, the investigator or any other physicians who are treating or examining the trial subject for other reasons, and the social insurance providers or any other insurer, if providing insurance that also covers personal damages, are to be authorized to provide the insurance company with information on request.
- g) The policyholder is obliged to ensure that well-ordered records are kept about the trial subject. The records must in particular be kept in such a way that, should any damage to health occur, the events of the trial can be reconstructed for individual cases.

6.2 Obligations of the trial subject

- a) For the duration of the clinical trial, the trial subject must inform the investigator at the next visit about any other illnesses or complaints that have arisen in the meantime and about any medication taken for such illnesses or complaints.
- b) Personal damages that may have occurred as a consequence of the clinical trial must be reported to the investigator without delay.
- c) The trial subject must take or submit to all the appropriate measures that help to identify the cause and the extent of the damage that has occurred, and that help to reduce such damage.

6.3 Breach of obligations

Should the policyholder, the third party commissioned by the policyholder to carry out the clinical trial, or the trial subject, breach the obligations incumbent upon them under the terms of this contract (cf. paragraphs 6.1 and 6.2) the insurance coverage shall cease, subject to the contents of paragraph 2 below, unless they can prove that the violation under the circumstances should be considered as accidental or that the damage would have occurred even had the obligations been fulfilled.

The breach of the obligations imposed by the insurance company on the policyholder or on the third party commissioned by it to carry out the clinical trial (paragraph 6.1), only entails the right of recourse by the insurance company against the policyholder, however not the cancellation of the insurance coverage of the trial subject. In such cases, under the insurance contract, the trial subject has a right to claim directly from the insurance company. The insurance company cannot make objections that arise from the insurance contract or from the Indian Law on insurance contracts against the trial subject. The policyholder must reimburse the insurance company for the compensation paid.

7. Miscellaneous

7.1 Contract duration

The present contract is concluded for the duration mentioned in the contract details and ends on completion of the clinical trial.

Should the clinical trial not be completed by the planned expiry of the contract, the policyholder must notify the insurance company without delay so that it can extend the contract accordingly.
